What are my rights now (until 12 April 2019)?

- Everyone in Scotland has the right to receive free treatments for the following:
 - Emergency care in a hospital (in the accident and emergency department, casualty department or minor injury unit)
 - Emergency care at a GP surgery
 - Emergency transport in an ambulance
 - Sexual health services (family planning)
 - Treatment for some infectious diseases and sexually transmitted infections in the best interests of public health.
- Everyone living in Scotland for more than 3 months has the right to register with a GP.
- You may be asked to show a European Health Insurance Card (EHIC) when you register with a GP, but even if you do not have one, you still have the right to register with the NHS and receive medical treatment.
- If you are staying for less than 3 months, you can still receive treatment but as a 'temporary resident'.
- You and your family members can also access free non-emergency primary (GP) and secondary (hospital-based) health care from the NHS in Scotland if you can prove you have the right to reside.
- Your non-EEA/EU family members may need to also provide proof of their right to join you in Scotland in order to receive free treatment, for example, an EEA family permit.¹

What will my rights be during the Brexit transition period (12 April 2019 to 31 December 2020)?

- The UK and the EU have reached agreement in principle that there will be no change to your rights during the Brexit transition period.
- They have also agreed that EEA/EU citizens arriving during this period will enjoy the same rights as those who arrived before Brexit.
- However, the transition period will only come into effect if the withdrawal agreement is ratified by both the EU and the UK before 12 April 2019.

What will my rights be after the transition period (after 1 January 2021)?

• Your rights to NHS services after the transition period are not yet clear. They will be negotiated between the EU and the UK during the transition period.
